Without the help of the following kind and generous people, this book would not have been possible. I am indebted to Elizabeth Ammons, Sheila Emerson, Alan Lebowitz, and Lisa MacFarlane for responding to the project in its early versions. My friends Margot Sempreora and Jon Hodge have been both encouraging and insightful throughout the various stages of the writing process. In addition, I owe thanks to my academic assistants, Adam Schenck and Angela Silvey, for their willingness to help prepare the final manuscript. My most tireless, insightful, and supportive reader, Valerie Rohy, deserves more thanks than I can express. I am also grateful to be blessed with a family that has inspired me in many ways. My father instilled in me a love for Italy and excellence while my mother showed by example how to be both strong and kind. Lastly, I must express deep gratitude to my husband and children, who have been patient enough to give me the time and space I needed to complete this study. Darin, Gabriel, and Ariana are the foundation upon which the rest is built.
