WORKS CITED

Barnett, Pamela. “‘And shortly for to seyn they were aton’: Chaucer’s Deflection of Rape in the Reeve’s and Franklin’s Tales.” Women’s Studies 22 (1993): 145–62.

Bowman, Mary. “‘Half as she were mad’: Dorigen in the Male World of the Franklin’s Tale.” Chaucer Review 27.3 (1993): 239–51.

———. “How the Woman Makes the Man: Chaucer’s Reciprocal Fictions in Troilus and Criseyde.” In Vitto and Marzec 139–64.

Ganze, Alison. “‘My trouthe for to holde—allas, allas!’: Dorigen and Honor in the Franklin’s Tale.” Chaucer Review 42.3 (2008): 312–29.

Ingham, Patricia Clare. “Homosociality and Creative Masculinity in the Knight's Tale.” In Beidler, Masculinities 23–35.

Jost, Jean. “Ambiguous Brotherhood in the Friar’s Tale and the Summoner’s Tale.” In Beidler, Masculinities 77–90.

Knight, Stephen. “Toward the fen”: Church and Churl in Chaucer’s Fabliaux.” In Phillips and Cooper 41–51.

Koppelman, Kate. “The Dreams in Which I’m Dying: Sublimation and Unstable Masculinities in Troilus and Criseyde.” In Fugh and Marzec 97–114.

Lewis, Celia. “Framing Fiction with Death: Chaucer’s Canterbury Tales and the Plague.” In Benson and Ridyard 139–64.

Phelpstead, Carl. “‘Th’ende is every tales strengthe’: Contextualizing Chaucerian Perspectives on Death and Judgment.” In Phillips and Cooper 97–110.

Rossi-Reder, Andrea. “Male Movement and Female Fixity in the Franklin’s Tale and Il Filocolo.” In Beidler, Masculinities 106–16.

———. “Introduction: The Revel, the Melodye, and the Bisynesse of Solas.” In Rushton and Hopkins 1–17.

