I received much help on this project that has stretched over many years.

Thanks, therefore, to Steven Smith, Simon Perris, and the anonymous readers provided by The Ohio State University Press for reading and commenting on the entire typescript; to Clifford Ando, Joseph Boone, Virginia Burrus, Stephanie Cobb, Dorota Dutsch, Mathew Kuefier, Kristina Meinking, Judith Perkins, Sara Phang, Nancy Rabinowitz, Jeff Tatum, and Greg Thalmann for reading portions of this work in its various manifestations; to Shadi Bartsch, Diana Burton, Mark Edwards, Tony Cuttriss, John Davidson, Alex Drummond, Helen Fitzgerald, Bruce Frier, Philip Gisondi, Jill Harries, Tania Hayes, Deborah Hollingsworth, Alison Keith, Jerzy Linderiski, Chris Marshall, Christabel Marshall, Jen Oliver, Lynn Peace, Arthur Pomeroy, Carl Rubino, Fran Scoble, Emily Simons, Judy Stacey, Mark Stephenson, Kristen Strohmeyer, Hannah Tokona, Deborah Willis, and David Wray for advice and support; to members of the Classics Programme and the Faculty of Humanities and Social Sciences at Victoria University of Wellington; to Judy Deuling for help with obtaining the images for the cover and for teaching relief a couple years ago; to the memories of Marcia Masterson and William Masterson; to Eugene O’Connor for being a genial, knowledgeable, and dependable editor; to Sharon James for providing crucial advice at a critical time; to Barbara Gold for advice on the manuscript and for support and friendship, for which I am most grateful, over the years; to Amy Richlin, who has been a wonderful intellectual and personal presence in my life.

And, lastly, to Timothy Heartt for believing and following with love.
