Human remains in society

Jean-Marc Dreyfus, Élisabeth Anstett

Published by Manchester University Press

Dreyfus, Jean-Marc and Élisabeth Anstett. Human remains in society: Curation and exhibition in the aftermath of genocide and mass-violence.

Project MUSE. muse.jhu.edu/book/51299.

For additional information about this book https://muse.jhu.edu/book/51299

For content related to this chapter https://muse.jhu.edu/related_content?type=book&id=1952855
Contents

List of figures

List of contributors

Acknowledgements

Introduction. Corpses in society: about human remains, necro-politics, necro-economy and the legacy of mass violence
Élisabeth Anstett and Jean-Marc Dreyfus

1 The unburied victims of Kenya’s Mau Mau Rebellion: where and when does the violence end?
David M. Anderson and Paul J. Lane

2 (Re)politicising the dead in post-Holocaust Poland: the afterlives of human remains at the Belżec extermination camp
Zuzanna Dziuban

3 Chained corpses: warfare, politics and religion after the Habsburg Empire in the Julian March, 1930s–1970s
Gaetano Dato

4 Exhumations in post-war rabbinical responsas
David Deutsch
Contents

5 (Re)cognising the corpse: individuality, identification and multidirectional memorialisation in post-genocide Rwanda
   Ayala Maurer-Prager

6 Corpses of atonement: the discovery, commemoration and reinterment of eleven Alsatian victims of Nazi terror, 1947–52
   Devlin M. Scofield

7 ‘Earth conceal not my blood’: forensic and archaeological approaches to locating the remains of Holocaust victims
   Caroline Sturdy Colls

8 The return of Herero and Nama bones from Germany: the victims’ struggle for recognition and recurring genocide memories in Namibia
   Vilho Amukwaya Shigwedha

9 A Beothuk skeleton (not) in a glass case: rumours of bones and the remembrance of an exterminated people in Newfoundland – the emotive immateriality of human remains
   John Harries

Index

249