Knowledge, democracy and action

Budd L. Hall, Edward T. Jackson, Rajesh Tandon, Jean-Marc Bobek

Published by Manchester University Press

Hall, Budd L., et al.
Knowledge, democracy and action: Community-university research partnerships in global perspectives.
Project MUSE. muse.jhu.edu/book/51330.

For additional information about this book
https://muse.jhu.edu/book/51330

For content related to this chapter
https://muse.jhu.edu/related_content?type=book&id=1956031
Contributors

SARAH AMYOT is currently the Programme Coordinator at the Community Council, a community-based research institution in Vicotira, BC. She is the former Youth Engagement Projects Coordinator for BC Healthy Communities and a former researcher for the Office of Community-Based Research at the University of Victoria.

FELIX M. BIVENS is a former doctoral student at the Institute of Development Studies at the University of Sussex. He has been working with Drs John Gaventa (St. Francis Xavier University) and Peter Taylor (IDRC-Canada) over the past few years on issues of participation, citizenship and governance. Felix has a special interest in the impact of community engagement on the teaching and learning inside our institutions of higher education.

JOSÉ BLANES JIMÉNEZ is a sociologist and Director of CEBEM. He has published extensively on municipal and regional development in Bolivia, including: informality and the urban economy; decentralization, social policy and municipal governments; local and indigenous–communitarian development. These publications have been used extensively in several MA programmes in Bolivia and the Latin American Faculty of Social Sciences in Ecuador.

DENIS BUSSIÈRES is a Ph.D. candidate in sociology at the University of Quebec at Montreal. His doctoral dissertation focuses on research partnerships. He is a research officer at the Research Centre on Social Innovations at UQAM CRISES. He was coordinator of the Quebec Network of Social Economy Research Partnerships (2005–11); and of, the Alliance of Community–university Research in the social economy (2001–05).

JORGE TÉLLEZ CARRASCO is a researcher with CEBEM, his doctorate is in forest engineering, with twelve years’ experience in the field of international cooperation for development. He specializes in applied research in natural resource management. He is currently responsible for work performed by the Andalusian Agency for International Cooperation and Development in Latin America, sub-Saharan Africa and the Mediterranean.

SARAH CORMODE is currently an Education Officer in the Aboriginal Education unit of the British Columbia Ministry of Education. She has an extensive track record of working on behalf of Indigenous communities and organizations and for three years was the manager of a major research project on Aboriginal student transition to post-secondary education between 2007–10.
CONTRIBUTORS

LATYR DIOUF is Director of Studies at the National College of Applied Economics in Dakar, Senegal. He is an expert on local development.

JEAN-MARC FONTAN is a professor of sociology at the University of Quebec at Montreal. He has over twenty years’ experience in research on local and community development and has an important number of publications in this field. He is a member of the Centre de recherche sur les innovations sociales, and founder of the Incubateur universitaire Parole d’excluEs.

LETLOTLO M. GARIBA completed a master’s degree in public policy and administration at Carleton University, Ottawa, and a bachelor’s degree in gender equality and social justice and philosophy from Nipissing University. She currently works as a policy analyst for the Ontario Federation of Indian Friendship Centres, a provincial Aboriginal organization in Toronto.

ALIOU GUISSÉ is the Director of the Ecology and Hydrology Laboratory at the Université Cheikh Anta Diop (UCAD) in Dakar, Senegal. He is a plant biologist with extensive experience in community based research in areas of ecological restoration.

BUDD L. HALL is Co-Director of the UNESCO Chair in Community-Based Research and Social Responsibility in Higher Education, founding Director of the Office of Community-Based Research and a professor of public administration at the University of Victoria in Canada. He also serves as Secretary of the Global Alliance for Community Engaged Research. A member of the Adult Education International Hall of Fame, Professor Hall is a recognized pioneer in the field of community-based participatory research and a well-known authority in the fields of participatory research, community–university engagement and adult and lifelong learning.

ANGIE HART is former Academic Director of Community University Partnership Programme, University of Brighton, and Professor of Child, Family and Community Health, School of Nursing and Midwifery, Faculty of Health and Social Science. She teaches health and social care practitioners and undertakes participatory research into inequalities in health and social care in relation to children and families. Professor Hart is also a community practitioner with many years’ experience of working in child and family mental health. As the adoptive parent of three children from the care system, she has experience as a service user of health and social care services in both the voluntary and statutory sector.

ESTELA C. IOTAS has a master’s in statistics and Ph.D. in education, majoring in research and evaluation, from the University of the Philippines. Presently, she is the Extension Director of Bukidnon State University in the Philippines, and is involved in various community-related projects. She has presented papers in the Philippines and abroad.
Contributors

Edward T. Jackson is a faculty member in the School of Public Policy and Administration at Carleton University in Ottawa, whose interests include community–university partnerships, higher education policy, social enterprise and social finance and programme evaluation. He has advised foundations, development agencies, governments and NGOs in fifty countries.

Lamine Kane is associated with REPAS, the participatory research network for Africa located in Dakar Senegal. He has worked in grassroots adult education, community development and rural animation for more than 30 years. He was associated with the founding of the International Participatory Research Network in the 1980s.

Nirmala Lall is currently a research officer with the Global Alliance for Community Engaged Research and a doctoral student at the University of Victoria. With twenty-five years of community development experience in urban and multicultural Toronto, Nirmala’s most recent research has focused on measuring the impact of community–university research partnerships.

Benjamin Maputi is associated with the Mt. Kitanglad Agri-Ecological Techno Demo Center and the Imbayo Multipurpose Cooperative in work to protect the sacred heritage forest of Mt. Kitanglad in the Philippines.

Eileen Martin has been Manager of the Science Shop at Queen’s University Belfast for fifteen years. She coordinated the development of Queen’s in the community initiative and Queen’s Community Outreach Strategy. She has participated in several EU-funded science shop projects, including the PERARES programme.

Emma McKenna has been Co-coordinator of the Science Shop at Queen’s University Belfast since 2001. She holds a Ph.D. in sociology and previously worked for the Northern Ireland Council for Voluntary Action and for the Women’s Support Network. She co-organized the last Living Knowledge International Science Shop conference, held in Belfast in August 2009.

Juliet Millican is Coordinator of international programmes for the Community University Partnership Programme, University of Brighton. She has over twenty-five years’ experience in Asia, Africa and Latin America in community-based research.

Felix S. Mirasol, Jr. has been the Protected Area Superintendent of Mt Kitainglad Range Natural Park, Philippines for eighteen years. He has travelled abroad as country reporter, speaker and presenter on environment forums. He has been involved in the training of local policymakers on environmental governance since 2006.

Joy Molina Mirasol is the Research Director of Bukidnon State University, Philippines. She holds a doctorate and master’s degree in applied mathematics. She has presented in national and international conferences in research. She has initiated several community engagements and research for local communities on environmental governance and management.
HENK MULDER coordinates Groningen University’s science shop (the Netherlands). Henk is co-founder of the Living Knowledge Network and currently leads the EU-funded PERARES project, engaging CSOs and researchers in research agenda setting. He teaches science communication. Henk has an M.Sc. in chemistry and a Ph.D. in energy and environmental sciences.

EDGAR ANTONIO PABÓN is currently a director with Centro Boliviano de Estudios Multidisciplinario (CEBEM), in Bolivia, and is an expert in local development.

MANDAKINI PANT is a consultant in development studies and online distance education. She has worked in PRIA, New Delhi, India (2000–10) as an educator and coordinator of online–distance education courses, as a researcher of the issues of marginalized leadership, rights, citizenship, governance, and adult education and livelihood, and editor of PRIA journals. She collaborated on international projects with University of Victoria, Canada and IDS Sussex, UK, among others. She was a faculty in SNDT Women’s University (1993–2000), Mumbai, in the Department of Sociology and the Research Centre for Women Studies. She has twenty-six publications to her credit.

DZULKIFLI ABDUL RAZAK took office as the Vice-Chancellor of Albukhary International University, after serving as the Vice-Chancellor of Universiti Sains Malaysia from 2000 until recently. He is the President of the International Association of Universities, and the inaugural president of the Asia-Pacific University–Community Engagement Network. He is also an executive committee member of Asia–Europe Meeting Advisory Education Hub Committee, and Association of Commonwealth Universities.

NORBERT STEINHAUS is Coordinator of the community-based and -directed Bonn Science Shop. The Coordinator of the Living Knowledge Network, a network of most Science Shops based in Europe and other parts of the world, he is one of the leading global authorities on the science shop movement. With a background in agriculture, an interest in environmental justice and promoting the role of community-controlled research structures within the context of community–university research partnerships, Norbert also has significant experience of and a passion for democratic decision making.

RAJESH TANDON is Co-Director of the UNESCO Chair in Community-Based Research and Social Responsibility in Higher Education, and the founding President of the Society for Participatory Research in Asia. Based in New Delhi, Dr Tandon is one of the leading world authorities on matters of participation, citizenship, community engagement and governance. He is Chair of the Global Alliance for Community Engaged Research, the Forum International of Montreal and the author of major studies for the Commonwealth Foundation, Global University Networks for Innovation, the Ford Foundation and the UK Department of Foreign Affairs and International Development.

EVREN TOK is an assistant professor in Qatar Faculty of Islamic Studies Public Policy Program in Doha, Qatar. He obtained his collaborative Ph.D. from the
CONTRIBUTORS

School of Public Policy and Administration and Institute of Political Economy at Carleton University, Ottawa. He is a research associate for Carleton Centre for Community Innovation.

CRYSTAL TREMBLAY is a PhD candidate and research associate in the Community-based Research Laboratory, Department of Geography, University of Victoria. Her research interests focus on participatory community development, multimedia and livelihood enhancement. She is a PhD fellow at the Centre for Cooperative and Community-based Economy (2011–12), and recipient of the Joseph Armand Bombardier SSHRC Doctoral Scholarship (2009–12).

DAVID WATSON is a historian and has been Principal of Green Templeton College, Oxford, since October 2010. Prior to taking up his current role, he was Professor of Higher Education Management at the Institute of Education, University of London. He was Vice-Chancellor of the University of Brighton (formerly Brighton Polytechnic) (1990–2005). His academic interests are in the history of American ideas and in higher education policy. His books include the Engaged University (2011); Lifelong Learning and the University (1998); Managing Strategy (2000); New Directions in Professional Higher Education (2000); Higher Education and the Lifecourse (2003); Managing Institutional Self-Study (2005).