The Protestant Orphan Society and its social significance in Ireland 1828–1940

June Cooper

Published by Manchester University Press

Cooper, June.
The Protestant Orphan Society and its social significance in Ireland 1828–1940.
Manchester University Press, 2015.
Project MUSE. muse.jhu.edu/book/51521.

For additional information about this book
https://muse.jhu.edu/book/51521

For content related to this chapter
https://muse.jhu.edu/related_content?type=book&id=1965932
To begin with, I would like to extend my thanks to Professor R. V. Comerford and Dr D. McLoughlin for their guidance and encouragement during the course of my studies at the National University of Ireland, Maynooth. I would also like to extend my appreciation to the director of the National Archives of Ireland, Aideen Ireland, who granted permission to use material from the Protestant Orphan Society collection in this book. In addition, I would like to mention Brian Donnelly and Zoë Reid, the National Archives of Ireland and Dr Raymond Refaussé, the Representative Church Body Library. Thanks also to the reading room staff who made my research possible at the National Archives, the National Library of Ireland, the Representative Church Body Library, the Royal Irish Academy, the National University of Ireland, Maynooth, the Early Printed Books Department, Trinity College Dublin, the Gwydd Museum, Bangor and the National Archives, Kew. I also owe a debt of gratitude to the secretaries of the St Stephen’s and Monaghan Protestant Orphan Societies, for their kind permission to examine private archival collections and to the secretary of the Meath Protestant Orphan Society who provided a short history of its work. I am most grateful to the team at Manchester University Press for the opportunity to publish my work and for their patience and guidance throughout the publishing process. In closing, I wish to offer special thanks to my family.