Acknowledgements

During the many years in which we have been working on this volume, we accumulated many intellectual debts. We are particularly grateful to Richard Abel, Adriano Aprà, Sandro Bernardi, Sila Berruti, Paolo Bertetto, Mireille Berton, Michele Canosa, Filippo Cappellano, Giulia Carluccio, Lucia Ceci, Scott Curtis, Monica Dall’Asta, Angela Dalle Vacche, Raffaele De Berti, Victoria Duckett, Alessandro Faccioli, Ruggero Eugeni, André Gaudreault, Cristina Jandelli, Nicola Labanca, Massimo Locatelli, Lorenzo Lorusso, Francesco Lucioli, Elena Mosconi, Peppino Ortoleva, Luca Peretti, Ivelise Perniola, Mario Perniola, Daniel Pitarch Fernandez, Francesco Pitassio, Francesco Piva, Ángel Quintana, Sarah Pesenti Campagnoni, Veronica Pravadelli, Leonardo Quaresima, Sergio Raffaelli, Chiara Simonigh, Pierre Sorlin, Domenico Spinosa, Deborah Toschi, Laurent Veray, Simone Venturini, and John P. Welle. Our research responded to the challenge and goals of the Permanent Seminar on History of Film Theories: our gratitude goes to Jane Gaines, co-founder of the Seminar. Some friends have been particularly involved in our work: thanks for the advice we had from Giorgio Bertellini, David Ward, and Dudley Andrew.

Most of the research was done in the Biblioteca Nazionale Centrale (Florence and Rome), the Bibliomedi ate ca ‘Mario Gromo’ at the Museo Nazionale del Cinema di Torino, Biblioteca Marucelliana (Florence), Biblioteca Militare Centrale (Rome), Biblioteca Fondazione Filippo Turati (Florence), Biblioteca Alessandrina (Rome), Emeroteca Romana-Archivio Storico Capitolino (Rome), Biblioteca Comunale dell’Archiginnasio (Bologna), Biblioteca Fondazione Istituto Gramsci (Rome), Bibliothèque Nationale de France, Bibliothèque de l’Arsenal, and the Beinecke Library at Yale University. Thanks to the members of these archives for their help and generosity, in particular to Donata Pesenti Campagnoni (Turin) and Kevin Repp (Yale).

Our research has been mainly supported with a grant by the Ministero dei Beni e delle Attività Culturali of Italy under the Direzione Generale per il Cinema and its ‘Archivi della teoria del cinema in Italia’ initiative, and through the CUC, the learning group which gathers Italian Film and Media scholars. Part of the funds also came from the Dipartimento di Studi Umanistici at the Università di Torino and Yale University. The Museo Nazionale del Cinema di Torino supported some of translations and hosted them on its website. Our special thanks to both the President and Director of Museo, Paolo Damilano and Alberto Barbera, respectively.
The editorial board of Amsterdam University Press displayed an incredible generosity in assisting us during the long process: our thanks goes to Jeroen Sondervan, Weihong Bao, Vinzenz Hediger, and Trond Lundemo.

Our gratitude goes to Siobhan Quinlan and Marco Ladd for their availability while translating part of these texts. Michael Cramer provided a first editing of the introductions. Courtney Ritter revised the entire book, helping the editors to clarify several passages, and providing some of the final notes: we are particularly indebted with her for her insight and generosity.
