Unpopular Culture
Pohlmann, Sascha, Luthe, Martin

Published by Amsterdam University Press

Pohlmann, Sascha and Martin Luthe.
Unpopular Culture.
Amsterdam University Press, 2016.
Project MUSE. muse.jhu.edu/book/66356.

For additional information about this book
https://muse.jhu.edu/book/66356

For content related to this chapter
https://muse.jhu.edu/related_content?type=book&id=2327943

This work is licensed under a Creative Commons Attribution 4.0 International License.
Unpopular Culture
Televisual Culture

The ‘televisual’ names a media culture generally in which television’s multiple dimensions have shaped and continue to alter the coordinates through which we understand, theorize, intervene, and challenge contemporary media culture. Televisual culture is a culture which both encompasses and crosses all aspects of television from its experiential dimensions to its aesthetic strategies, from its technological developments to its crossmedial consequences. Concepts like liveness, media event, audiences, broadcasting need recasting as problematics around which the televisual will get interrogated within a dynamic media landscape. Rather than accept the narrative of television’s obsolescence, the series aims at seriously analyzing both the contemporary specificity of the televisual and the challenges thrown up by new developments in technology and theory in an age where digitalization and convergence are redrawing the boundaries of media.

Series Editors:
Sudeep Dasgupta, Joke Hermes, Jaap Kooijman, Markus Stauff