Acknowledgments

We are grateful to a number of institutions and individuals whose support has proven essential, in particular the Royal Flemish Academy of Belgium for Science and the Arts in Brussels, for funding and hosting the conference ‘Horizontal Learning within High Medieval Religious Communities’, held on 1 and 2 September 2016. Additional financial and/or logistic support for the conference came from Ghent University’s Henri Pirenne Institute for Medieval Studies, Department of History, and Faculty of Arts and Philosophy; and the Leuven Centre for the Study of the Transmission of Texts and Ideas in Antiquity. The Research Foundation-Flanders funded Micol Long and Tjamke Snijders’s research as represented in these pages. Lastly, we wish to express our gratitude to all who attended this successful meeting; the speakers, for agreeing to commit their papers to permanent record; and the board of the ‘Knowledge Communities’ series and the editorial team at Amsterdam University Press, for their continued faith in this publication.
