Table of Contents

Acknowledgments 7

Introduction: ‘The sanguine, pulsating, enterprising modern life’:
- Cinema and Vitalism 9
- Taking Life for a Spin 9
- Turn-of-the-century Vitalism and Philosophy of Life 20
- Early Film Theory 27
- Cinematic Vitalism 34

1. Vitalism and Abstraction 47
   - Rhythm and Non-Organic Life from Hans Richter to Sergei Eisenstein 47
   - The Reinvention of Cinema in Abstract Film 47
   - A Universal Language 50
   - Bergson, Intuition, and Art 59
   - Setting Form into Motion: Scroll Paintings and Empathy 65
   - The Transition to Film 78
   - Back into Matter: from Abstraction to Montage 86

2. New Worlds 97
   - Uexküll’s Umwelt Theory at the Movies 97
   - Forays 97
   - A Meditation on Mediated Dogs 103
   - The Agony of the Starfish: Uexküll’s Chronophotography 114
   - Of Ticks and Humans 123
   - Against Anthropocentrism: Umwelt and Cinema 127
   - A Necessary Field of Action: Benjamin, Umwelt, and Play 136
   - Painlevé’s Cinema of Bewilderment 147

3. The Interweaving of World and Self 163
   - Transformations of Mood in Expressionist and Kammerspiel Film 163
   - The Mediation of a Dog’s World 163
   - A Brief Aesthetic History of Stimmung 168
   - Turn-of-the-Century Stimmung and Cinema: Georg Simmel and Hugo von Hofmannsthal 174
   - Baláz, Kammerspielfilm, and Expressionism 182
   - The Kammerspiel Film: Naturalist Plots and Progressive Aesthetics 195
4. Open Bodies, Open Stories
Evolution, Narration, and Spectatorship in Post-war Film Theory
The Axolotl and Cinema: Bazin, Bergson, and Evolution
Cinema’s Milieu
Life and the Temporalities of Film and Painting
Post-Apocalyptic Life: Kracauer’s Theory of Film

Conclusion
Vital Media

Bibliography

Index of Films

Index of Names

Index of Subjects

Page numbers are provided for reference.