This book, and the survey that gave birth to it, would not have been possible without the collective commitment of the many persons who dedicated their energies to it.

The authors of this book were not the only ones to pass out surveys amongst the dusty venues of the World Social Forum: they also want to thank, for sharing this work and the long evening discussions and debriefings in a courtyard of Dakar, Raphaël Botiveau, Abigaïl Boucheix, Emmanuelle Bouilly, Christophe Broqua, Marie Brossier, Emma Chaouane, Antoine De Boyer, Mathilde Debain, Yacine Diagne, Hadyatou Diallo, Yaya Diaw, Geneviève Diémé, Seynabou Dramé, Rokaya Fall, Ousmane Fall, Clarisse Fordant, Thomas Fouquet, Lisbeth Gasca, Mame Coumba Gueye, Véronique Jampy, Idrissa Mané, Moussa Montero, Marame Ndour, Saliou Ngom, Thomas Perrot, Ophélie Rillon, Ismaïla Sané, Jeanne Semin, Aude Servais, Nedjib Sidi Moussa, Safi Virginius, and Awa Yade.

Not only did they pass out surveys but they were precious for both material and intellectual reasons: thank you Xavier Audrain, Séverine Awenengo, and Hélène Charton for your commitment to this experience. We also greatly benefited from Prof. Ibrahima Thioub's help, as well as from other colleagues of the Cheikh Anta Diop University in Dakar (UCAD), the Centre de recherche sur les politiques sociales de Dakar (CREPOS) and the Gaston Berger University (GBU) in Saint-Louis. Paul Antropius and his digital creativity were invaluable in the conception of a database that allowed us to code and stock data online, and Ilhame Hajji's help was crucial for statistical exploitation. The book was translated by Susan Taponier, whose commitment was precious. Marina Urquidi also translated a chapter, and Alice Judell checked the final English editing.

The book greatly benefited from the comments of Sidney Tarrow and Julie Pagis during a workshop in spring 2012 in Paris, and from Jim Jasper and the reviewers of Amsterdam University Press.

The survey and the book have been supported by the graduate school college of Paris 1 Panthéon-Sorbonne, the Research Group Extreme Crises, the ANR Causes Africaines, two CNRS research units from Paris 1 Panthéon-Sorbonne, the CESSP and the IMAF, the department of political science at Panthéon-Sorbonne, the Labex Tepsis, and the Service de coopération culturelle de l'Ambassade de France (SCAC) in Dakar. As always, Catherine Bailleux was an invaluable administrative support, with Chantal Lisse.
