Contributors to this Volume

Masha Cerovic is Deputy Director of the Centre d’études franco-russe de Moscou. In 2012 she has defended her PhD Thesis on Soviet Partisans under German occupation at the University Paris 1 Panthéon Sorbonne.

Juliette Denis in 2015 defended her PhD Thesis at the University of Nanterre about the annexation and sovietization of Latvia (1940-1949) under the supervision of Annette Becker and Nicolas Werth. She works on the history of Stalinism and of the Second World War on the Eastern front.

Sabine Dullin is professor of History at Sciences Po Paris. Her research focuses upon the history of Twentieth-Century Russia. She has published extensively on the history of Communism and the Soviet Union.

Gabriella Gribaudi is professor in Contemporary History at University of Naples “Federico II”, Department of Social Sciences. She has published on the impact of air and land war in Italy and Naples in particular.

Stefan-Ludwig Hoffmann is Associate Professor at the Department of History at the University of California Berkeley. He specializes on late modern European, German, and transnational history and has published on a wide range of topics, including the history of modern civil society, Freemasonry, human rights, private life, and German photography. He is preparing a monograph on Berlin in the 1940s.

Audrey Kichelewski is Assistant Professor at the Contemporary History Institute of Strasbourg University and a member of Research group on Central Europe under the supervision of Antoine Marès (GDR-CNRS). Her fields of interest include Polish Jewish Modern History, Polish Jewish presence in France and Holocaust Memory in Poland and France.

Sandrine Kott is professor of European Contemporary History at the University of Geneva. She has widely published in her principal fields of expertise: the history of social welfare and labor law in France and Germany since the end of the nineteenth century, as well as labor relations in those countries of ‘real existing socialism’, in particular the German Democratic Republic. She has developed the transnational and global dimensions of each of these topics utilizing the archives and resources of international organizations and particularly the International Labor Organization.

Julie Le Gac is a postdoctoral fellow at the University Paris Sorbonne (LabEx EHNE). In 2011 she has defended her PhD Thesis on the French expeditionary corps in Italy (November 1942-July 1944).

Dirk Luyten is a researcher at CEGESOMA (Centre for Historical Research and Documentation on War and Contemporary Society) in Brussels and guest professor at Ghent University. He widely published in the interrelated fields of legal history, punishment of economic collaboration, financial and economic history of the world wars, corporatism, social policy, industrial relations and strikes and is involved in different European research projects.

Philip Nord specializes in the political and cultural history of modern France at the Department of History at Princeton University. He is affiliated with the French department and the European Politics and Society Program and is director of the Shelby Cullom Davis Center for Historical Studies. He published extensively on the advance of democratic ideas and practices in 19th century France and on the development of European civil societies. In 2010 he published his monograph examining the remaking of the French state at the Liberation under the title France’s New Deal: From the Thirties to the Postwar Era.

Peter Romijn is Senior researcher at the NIOD Institute for War, Holocaust, and Genocide Studies and Professor of History at the University of Amsterdam. He published on the history of the Netherlands in the Second World War and its aftermath form an international perspective: the bureaucracy under German occupation, the persecution of the Dutch Jews, the political purges, and the Dutch-Indonesian war of decolonization. Currently he is engaged in a project on the Netherlands at war 1940-1949.

Matěj Spurný is senior lecturer at the Department of Social History at the Charles University Prague. His fields of research are nationalism and the multi ethnicity in the Czech lands in the 20th century and the history of modern European dictatorship. In 2011 he published his PhD thesis on the social marginalization and integration of minorities in the Czech borderlands 1945-1960.
Polymeris Voglis is Associate Professor of History at the University of Thessaly. He studied at the University of Athens (BA, MA) and the European University Institute (PhD). His research interests concern the Greek civil war and postwar history, social and cultural history. He has published monographs in Greek and in English on the Political Prisoners during the Greek civil war, on Greek society under the occupation and on the social dynamics of the Greek civil war.

Olivier Wieviorka is professor at the Ecole normale supérieure de Cachan and senior fellow at the Institut universitaire de France. His main publications in English include Normandy. The landings to the Liberation of Paris (2008); Orphans of the Republic (2009); and Divided Memory. The French recollection of World War II (2012). His Histoire de la résistance will appear in 2016.

Marcin Zaremba (1966) graduated in History and Sociology from Warsaw University, working in the History Department of Warsaw University. His fields of interest include Communism, nationalism, ethnicity, ethnic minorities, and the memory of the Holocaust in post-war Poland.