Acknowledgements

It is a pleasure to look back on the numerous letters, e-mail exchanges, and conversations that I have had over the years with my friends and colleagues about the contents of this book. They all added to my knowledge or corrected mistakes I had made. I mention Marten Jan Bok first because, in addition to his frequent help, he encouraged me to write a book about auctions of works of art in Amsterdam, at a time when I had just begun to collect sales inventories for my database.1 I am also grateful to him for helping me in the finishing stages of publishing this book, with checking information, with the collection of illustrations, and with other matters to which I was not able to attend. Paul Crenshaw read the latest version of the book in typescript and gave me the benefit of his perceptive comments. Albert Blankert, Alan Chong, Neil DeMarchi, Amy Golahny, Anne Goldgar, Egbert Haverkamp-Begemann, Walter Liedtke, Otto Naumann, Gary Schwartz, and Michael Zell commented on individual chapters, some of which were published elsewhere. Jeroen van Meerwijk contributed to my research on notarial inventories and made a special investigation at my request of the court cases involving the art dealer Johannes de Renialme in the Rijksarchief in The Hague. S. Middelhoek and Wout Spies helped with my genealogical research on the Van Maerlen and Van Soldt families (Chapter 19) and on Robert van der Hoeve (Chapter 21). In the last stages of revision, Louisa Ruby of the Frick Art Reference Library answered many questions about my database on Amsterdam inventories, to which, due to a computer breakdown, I no longer had access. David Smith of CUADRA Associates gave me his patient, unstinting, and efficient help with my software problems and with the development of my databank on Amsterdam auction sales and inventories. Suzanne Bogman and Chantal Nicolaes of Amsterdam University Press, who carefully copy-edited the typescript, helped to guide the book to its completion. I am grateful to them all.

References to Archival Sources

The archival references in this book, unless otherwise specified, are to manuscript sources preserved in the Municipal Archives of Amsterdam (Gemeentearchief Amsterdam, abbreviated GAA, but generally omitted). Within the GAA, I make use exclusively of three archives: notarial (abbreviated NA), Orphan Chamber (Weeskamer, abbreviated WK) and Bankruptcy Chamber (Desolate Boedelskamer, abbreviated DBK).

Monetary Equivalents

17th century prices and values, throughout this book, are either expressed in gulden (abbreviated f), stuivers (20 to the gulden, abbreviated st.), and penningen (16 to the stuiver, abbreviated pen.), or in Flemish pounds (6 gulden to a pound). Prices are usually expressed as in the following example: f 10: 5: 3. This should be read as 10 gulden, 5 stuivers, 3 penningen. In some tables, to save space, the stuivers have been converted to fractions of a gulden, rounded off to the second decimal. Thus, f 10.26 is equal to f 10: 5: 3. Occasional reference is also made to schellingen, worth 6 st. and to rijksdaalders (or rycxdaelders), worth 2 f 10 st.

It is useful to remember that a semi-skilled carpenter was paid about 1 gulden a day and that a typical merchant’s house in Amsterdam cost anywhere from f 5,000 to 13,000 f (which was the price for which Rembrandt bought his large house on the Breestraat).

Notice

A reasonable attempt has been made to write the proper names in this book in a consistent manner. This means choosing one variant of each name as it was written in the 17th century and sticking through it. This standard has not systematically been achieved. However, the main variants of the “standard spelling” have been inserted in the index in parentheses wherever such minor inconsistencies have been detected.
