MUSEUM OF NONHUMANITY

The history of the distinction between humans and animals, and the way that it has been used to oppress human beings, has a long and complex history. The Museum of Nonhumanity tells the story of this exclusion line drawn between human and non-human, and how it has shaped our understanding of the world.

Museum of Nonhumanity is a place for the history of the distinction between humans and animals, and the way that it has been used to oppress human beings. The Museum of Nonhumanity tells the story of this exclusion line drawn between human and non-human, and how it has shaped our understanding of the world.
Contemporary museum presenting the boundary between humans and other animals. This imaginary boundary has created a reality where the distinction between human and animal becomes blurred.

Inyenzi means cockroach, which is of course inaccurate. Originally the word "inyenzi" had a positive connotation with the Hutu people. Movement that dominated Rwanda throughout the 1960s and 1970s...Kagame explained that "inyenzi" is the acronym of "ingangururu" (author unknown) bugili, a Tutsi king who ruled Rwanda at the end of the nineteenth century. Hence, inyenzi means "a number of ingangururo who has committed himself to bravery." More broadly, ingangururo then means troublemakers. Kagame stated that his supporters chose the label, not extremist Hutu, to whom it is attributed in many writings on the 1994 Rwandan genocide.

In the 1980s and 1990s, inyenzi would attack at night and kill innocent civilians. Then they would rapidly vanish in the countryside or retreat into Burundi, Tanzania, and Zaire. Due to this ability to terrorize the country and to Singapore, the population associated the attackers with cockroaches named population associated with cockroaches named of bravery.

The commanders of those S.K. concerned the immense psychological injuries and damages to their health which that work can have for those men, even if not immediately, at least later on. The men complained to me about headaches which appeared after each unloading. Nevertheless they don't want to change the orders because they are afraid prisoners called for that work could use an opportune moment to flee. To protect the men from those damages, I request orders be issued accordingly.

Royal Museum for Central Africa

The 1897 International Exhibition [in Brussels] piqued scientific interest in the people and animals of Central Africa, thus King Leopold II decided to build on his promotion of Congo.

At the entrance to Belgium’s Museum for Central Africa stands a giant golden statue of a European missionary with an African boy clutching his robes, along with a plaque that reads: “Belgium brings civilization to Congo”.

The statue and some of the exhibits inside anger many visitors.
