The BABEL Working Group is a collective and desiring-assemblage of scholar-gypsies with no leaders or followers, no top and no bottom, and only a middle. BABEL roams and stalks the ruins of the post-historical university as a multiplicity, a pack, looking for other roaming packs with which to co-habit and build temporary shelters for intellectual vagabonds. We also take in strays.

It must be vanilla-wonderful to be a fallen angel surrounded by other lambent sylphids who share all your pain and all your memories, your wings, your span, your ambition, and your dark side—the dark side that gives your light its body.
