ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

I extend my thanks to teachers and colleagues who supervised and otherwise contributed to my education and this study. Above all, I express my gratitude to Professor Jacob Neusner, whose careful critique shows throughout this study. The book was first presented in his graduate seminar and written under his guidance. I shall always appreciate how generously he gives of his instruction, time, and energy. The students in Professor Neusner's seminar over the past three years have improved my work through their comments and criticisms. I extend my thanks to Professors Alan Avery-Peck (Tulane University) and Louis Newman (Carleton College), as well as Mr. Howard Schwartz, Mrs. Judith Romney Wegner, and Mr. Paul Flesher. In addition, Mr. Arnold Sanders of Brown University's English Department read the entire manuscript and suggested numerous improvements in style and consistency. I gratefully acknowledge his help and friendship. I of course retain responsibility for any errors that may remain below.

Brown University has supported me throughout my graduate education with University and Teaching Fellowships, for which I am grateful. I wish to thank as well the Max Richter Foundation, for providing me with summer study grants that enabled me to continue work on this study. Finally, the Feder Fund for Judaic Studies at Brown University has enhanced my education, particularly by providing much needed travel grants.

The manuscript was prepared by Verbatim Word Processing. I extend special thanks to Ms. Catherine Hawkes, who typed most of the text.

This book is dedicated to my wife, Gayle Brooks, who supports me in more ways than I can enumerate.
