Tasting the Dish

Satlow, Michael

Published by Brown Judaic Studies

Satlow, Michael.
Tasting the Dish: Rabbinic Rhetorics of Sexuality.

For additional information about this book
https://muse.jhu.edu/book/73873

For content related to this chapter
https://muse.jhu.edu/related_content?type=book&id=2545370
Brown Judaic Studies has been publishing scholarly books in all areas of Judaic studies for forty years. Our books, many of which contain groundbreaking scholarship, were typically printed in small runs and are not easily accessible outside of major research libraries. We are delighted that with the support of a grant from the National Endowment for the Humanities/Andrew W. Mellon Foundation Humanities Open Book Program, we are now able to make available, in digital, open-access, format, fifty titles from our backlist.

Michael Satlow’s Tasting the Dish: Rabbinic Rhetorics of Sexuality (1995) is a study of the ways in which the rabbis of antiquity thought about sexuality. It examines what lies behind their rhetoric, both in terms of their assumptions as well as their strategies to promote their legislation through persuasion rather than coercion.

This edition incorporates typographical corrections of the original text. It also contains a new source index.

Michael L. Satlow
Managing Editor
October, 2019