Acknowledgements

My thanks go in the first place to the Max Planck Institute for European Legal History for its hospitality in the spring of 2014 and 2015; two lectures I held there obliged me to order and tauten my thinking. Further discussion with Thomas Duve and Peter Collin proved particularly useful.

I also thank my student assistants Hannah Hömberg and Julian Schwarz for taking on the arduous tasks of proofreading and literature procurement, as well as Roland Römhildt for useful suggestions. Above all, Anna Schulze has earned my gratitude for her sensitive but resolute editing. Cornelia Vetter and Barbara Wennemer-Abée transformed the handwritten manuscript, as always the product of work with numerous pencils, into a publishable text. My thanks also go to them.

However, my deepest gratitude is owed to my wife, who has accompanied my – notwithstanding my emeritus status – unquenchable exploratory urge with cheerful imperturbability. This book is dedicated to her.
