“A fresh, stimulating and contemporary approach to conceptualising and responding to theories, research, policies and practices on ageing, gender and sexualities. This unrivalled global collection provides essential intersectional and multidisciplinary perspectives that challenge us all.”

Trish Hafford-Letchfield, Middlesex University London

With an increasingly diverse ageing population, we need to expand our understanding of how social divisions intersect to affect outcomes in later life. This edited collection examines ageing, gender and sexualities from multidisciplinary and geographically diverse perspectives and looks at how these factors combine with other social divisions to affect experiences of ageing. It draws on theory and empirical data to provide both conceptual knowledge and clear ‘real-world’ illustrations, and includes section introductions to guide the reader through the debates and ideas.

Andrew King is Professor of Sociology at the University of Surrey, UK, where he is also Co-Director of the Centre for Research on Ageing and Gender.

Kathryn Almack is Professor of Health and Family Lives at the University of Hertfordshire, UK. Her research has included a focus on LGBT older people, ageing and end-of-life care.

Rebecca L. Jones is Senior Lecturer in Health at The Open University, UK. She researches ageing and sexuality across the life course and especially sexuality in later life.
