The Triple Bind of Single-Parent Families

Nieuwenhuis, Rense, Maldonado, Laurie C.

Published by Bristol University Press

Nieuwenhuis, Rense and Laurie C. Maldonado.

Bristol University Press, 2018.
Project MUSE. muse.jhu.edu/book/80517.
Notes on contributors

Malin Bergström is a child psychologist and PhD at the Centre for Health Equity Studies (CHESS), Stockholm University/Karolinska Institute, Sweden and Department of Medicine, Karolinska Institute. Her research interests are in health and family relations in shared residence.

Jonathan Bradshaw is Emeritus Professor of Social Policy at the University of York, UK. His research interests are in social security, child wellbeing and welfare state comparisons.

Young-hwan Byun holds a PhD in political science from the City University of New York (CUNY). He is a Researcher at the Swedish Institute for Social Research (SOFI), Stockholm University, Sweden. His research interests include comparative welfare states and the political economy of income distribution.

Gideon Calder is Senior Lecturer in Social Sciences and Social Policy at Swansea University, UK. He has written or edited nine books on issues ranging from the welfare state to climate change, and has a particular interest in the normative questions arising from different forms of inequality. He is currently working on childcare as a social justice issue. His most recent book is How Inequality Runs in Families: Unfair Advantage and the Limits of Social Mobility (Policy Press, 2016), and he is in the process of co-editing The Routledge Handbook of Childhood and Children. He is also Co-Editor of the journal Ethics and Social Welfare.

Bea Cantillon is Professor of Social Policy and Director of the Herman Deleeck Centre for Social Policy at the University of Antwerp, Belgium. She has published on issues relating to poverty, social policy, social security, the welfare state and gender. She has acted as a consultant to, among others, the OECD, the European Commission and the Belgian government. Books she has co-edited include Social Indicators: The EU and Social Inclusion (with T. Atkinson, E. Marler, and B. Nolan) and Reconciling Work and Poverty Reduction (with F. Vandenbroucke), both from Oxford University Press.

Yekaterina Chzhen is a Social and Economic Policy Specialist at the UNICEF Office for Research – Innocenti in Florence, Italy. Her research interests are in income inequality, multidimensional child Diego Collado graduated in industrial engineering at the University of Chile and obtained an MSc in social policy analysis at the University of Leuven (KU Leuven). Currently, he is a PhD researcher at the Herman Deleeck Centre for Social Policy, University of Antwerp, Belgium. His research focuses on social policy, financial work incentives and poverty.

Jaap Dronkers held a Chair in international comparative research on educational performance and social inequality at Maastricht University, the Netherlands. His research interests included the causes and consequences of unequal educational and occupational attainment; changes in educational opportunities; effect differences between public and religious schools; the educational and occupational achievement of migrants from different origins and in various countries of destination; the linkages between school and the labour market; the effects of parental divorce on children; cross-national differences in causes of divorce, education of Dutch elites and European nobility.

Ann-Zofie Duvander is Professor of Demography at the Department of Sociology, Stockholm University and a Senior Researcher at the Swedish Inspectorate of the Social Insurance. Her research interests concern family policy and its consequences, in particular demographic and labour market outcomes.

Ingrid Esser is a researcher at the Swedish Institute for Social Research (SOFI), Stockholm University, Sweden. Her research interests include welfare state and labour market research, with a focus on the sociology of work; work values; job preferences; job quality, wellbeing and health.

Guðný Björk Eydal is a Professor at the Faculty of Social Work, University of Iceland, Reykjavik, Iceland. Her main fields of research are social and family policies, with emphasis on care policies, social services and disaster social work. Many of her projects apply comparative perspectives and compare policies and outcomes among the Nordic countries. Recent publications include the book Fatherhood in the Nordic Welfare States: Comparing Care Policies and Practices, which she edited with Tine Rostgaard.
Emma Fransson is a child psychologist and researcher (PhD) at CHESS, Stockholm University/Karolinska Institutet, Sweden. Her research interests are in the relationship between stressors and health in general, and particularly the mental health of children in different family types.

Janet C. Gornick is Professor of Political Science and Sociology at the Graduate Center of the City University of New York, US. She also serves as Director of the Stone Center on Socio-Economic Inequality, which includes the US Office of LIS. Most of her research is comparative and concerns the impact of social welfare policies on economic gender disparities and on household income inequality. She is co-author or co-editor of three books: Families That Work: Policies for Reconciling Parenthood and Employment (2003), Gender Equality: Transforming Family Divisions of Labor (2009) and Income Inequality: Economic Disparities and the Middle Class in Affluent Countries (2013).

Susan Harkness is Professor of Public Policy and Director of the Understanding Society Policy Unit at the Institute for Social and Economic Research, Essex University, UK. She is interested in gender and families, and their relationship to inequality and poverty.

Juho Härkönen is Professor of Sociology at Stockholm University, Sweden and Visiting Professor at the University of Turku, Finland. His research interests cover life-course research, social stratification, family demography, health and comparative research. His recent research has been published in Advances in Life Course Research, Demography, European Journal of Population, European Sociological Review and Social Forces. He is Co-Editor of Advances in Life Course Research.

Jeroen Horemans holds a PhD in social and economic sciences. Currently, he is a Guest Lecturer at the University of Antwerp, Belgium and a Postdoctoral Researcher at the Herman Deleeck Centre for Social Policy, University of Antwerp. His main research interests include in-work poverty, nonstandard employment and income inequality in a comparative perspective.

Sabine Hübgen is a Research Fellow at the WZB Berlin Social Science Center. Her research interests cover gender and family, poverty risks, social inequality and welfare states.
Antonia Keung is a Lecturer in the Department of Social Policy and Social Work at the University of York, UK. Her research interests are in child support policy, poverty and child wellbeing.

Nicklas Korsell is a Senior Researcher at the Swedish Inspectorate of the Social Insurance. He holds a PhD in statistics from Uppsala University, Sweden and his research interests concern statistical modelling and social insurance implications; for example, parental leave benefit issues.

Sara Brolin Låftman is a sociologist and researcher (PhD) at CHESS, Stockholm University/Karolinska Institutet, Sweden. Her research interests are the psychosocial environment in school, adolescent health and family sociology.

Wim Van Lancker is Assistant Professor of Social Work and Social Policy at the Centre for Sociological Research of the University of Leuven, Belgium. He is a Research Fellow of the Herman Deleeck Centre for Social Policy at the University of Antwerp. His main research areas are family policy, child poverty and social inequality, the design and effectiveness of social policy measures, the Matthew Effect and the social investment state. Recent work has appeared in Social Science Research, Social Policy & Administration and the International Journal of Comparative Sociology. More information: www.wimvanlancker.be/.

Marloes de Lange is an Educational Researcher at the HAN University of Applied Sciences, the Netherlands. Her research interests include the sociology of education, work and labour markets.

Laurie C. Maldonado is a scholar on single-parent families in the US and across countries. She holds an MSW and a PhD in social welfare at the University of California, Los Angeles (UCLA), US. She is a Research Associate at the Stone Center on Socio-Economic Inequality at the Graduate Center, City University of New York and is affiliated with LIS Cross-National Data Center. She is a Lecturer at Columbia University School of Social Work, US.

Ive Marx is Professor and Chair of the Department of Sociology at the University of Antwerp, Belgium. He is a Research Fellow at the Institute for the Study of Labor IZA in Bonn, Germany. His main research interest is labour market and welfare state change in relation to the distribution of income, with a particular focus on poverty. He has published extensively on the issue of in-work poverty and minimum income protection.

Natascha Van Mechelen graduated in political and social sciences at the University of Leuven (KU Leuven), Belgium. She worked as a Postdoctoral Research Scientist at the Herman Deleeck Center for Social Policy, University of Antwerp, Belgium until 2016. Currently, she works at the Belgian Federal Public Service Social Security. Her main research interests are in the field of microsimulation and comparative studies on minimum income protection (social assistance, child benefits and minimum wage) and the impact on poverty and social inequality.

Ann Morissens holds a PhD in social sciences and is a Lecturer at the Department of Health and Social Work at the University College Leuven-Limburg (UCLL), Belgium. She is interested in research related to poverty and inequality, the role of policies (especially family policies) and outcomes for groups at risk in a comparative perspective.

Rense Nieuwenhuis is Assistant Professor of Sociology at the Swedish Institute for Social Research (SOFI) and an affiliate of the Linnaeus Center on Social Policy and Family Dynamics in Europe (SPaDE), both at Stockholm University, Sweden. He is interested in how the interplay between social policies and demographic trends gives rise to economic inequalities. www.rensenieuwenhuis.nl

Karen M. Olsen is a Professor at the Norwegian School of Economics (NHH), Bergen, Norway. Her research interests include human resource management and industrial relations, with a focus on employment relations, job quality, nonstandard work arrangements and sickness absence.

Viveca Östberg is a Sociology Professor at CHESS, Stockholm University/Karolinska Institutet, Sweden. Her research interests are in welfare research in general as well as health inequalities, with a focus on children and youth.

Joakim Palme has been Professor of Political Science at the Department of Government, Uppsala University, Sweden, since 2009, and Chairman of The Migrations Studies Delegation (Delmi), Sweden. Palme holds a PhD in sociology from Stockholm University.
Throughout the 1980s and 1990s, he contributed to the Social Citizenship Indicator Program (SCIP) at the Swedish Institute for Social Research (SOFI). From 1999 to 2001, he chaired the Swedish Welfare Commission. From 2002 to 2011, he was the Director of the Institute for Futures Studies in Stockholm. He has published extensively on the welfare state as a strategy of equality and the politics of the welfare state.

Mariña Fernández Salgado is a Lecturer in Economics at Universidad de Alcalá, Madrid, Spain. Her research focuses on understanding family decision-making and its effects on children’s outcomes. She is also interested in how the functioning of the labour market leads to increasing inequalities.

Eva Sierminska is a Senior Researcher at the Luxembourg Institute of Socio-Economic Research (LISER). She is a Research Fellow at IZA in Bonn, Germany, the German Institute of Economic Research (DIW Berlin) and the Centre for Population, Development and Labour Economics, United Nations University (POP-UNU Merit). Her research interests include labour economics, distribution and household finance. She holds a PhD in economics from Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore, US. She has worked at the US Bureau of Labor Statistics, Georgetown University in Washington DC and Luxembourg Income Study. She has been a visiting researcher at the University of Arizona, San Francisco Federal Reserve Board, DIW Berlin, IZA, INED in Paris and Collegio Carlo Alberto in Turin.

Anne Grete Tøge has a PhD in social work and social policy and works as a researcher at the Work Research Institute, Oslo and Akershus University of Applied Sciences, Norway. Over the last few years, she has conducted a number of longitudinal studies on the health effects of the 2008 economic recession and individual unemployment experiences in Europe. She is also engaged in several cluster-randomised trials in Norway, investigating the effects of complex interventions aimed at reducing school dropouts, improving follow-up of active labour-market programme participants and reducing intergenerational transmission of poverty.

Morag C. Treanor is a Senior Lecturer in social policy/sociology at the University of Stirling, UK. The primary focus of her work is child poverty – its measurement, causes, consequences, mitigation and prevention. Her work spans academic research and publications, applied social research for public and voluntary bodies and statistical analysis of large-scale datasets. She has a particular interest in the effects of poverty and material deprivation on children and families, particularly lone mothers.

Hannah Zagel is a Postdoctoral Researcher at Humboldt-University of Berlin and WZB Berlin Social Science Center, Germany. Her research interests include family complexity and change, social inequality, comparative family policy and welfare states.