List of figures

Figure 1.1  The ninth or tenth-century iron ring from Forsa church in Hälsingland, central Sweden. Source: Photo by Sven Rosborn. CC BY-SA 3.0. 15
Figure 1.2  Frösöstenen, the Frösö rune stone from Jämtland in Sweden, is the northernmost raised rune stone in Scandinavia, dated to the second half of the eleventh century. Source: Photo by Lavallen. 18
Figure 1.3  Illustration of Christ on the larger and younger Jelling rune stone. Together with the older and smaller rune stone, Jelling church and two Viking-Age grave mounds they form the Jelling monuments, a UNESCO World Heritage site in Jutland, Denmark. Source: Photo by Roberto Fortuna, National Museum of Denmark. CC BY-SA 3.0. 21
Figure 2.1  Drawing from Linnaeus’ diary to illustrate ‘The Mountains’ (Fjällen). With kind permission from The Linnean Society, London. 30
Figure 2.2  Frontispiece for Flora Lapponica, published 1737. With kind permission from The Linnean Society, London. 34
Figure 2.3  ‘Carolus Linnaeus e Lapponia Redux Aetat’. Life-size portrait of Linnaeus in Sami costume by Martin Hoffman, 1737. With kind permission from The Linnean Society, London. 36
Figure 3.1  Kullervon-sotaanläähtö. Postage stamp depicting the Kalevala-inspired painting ‘Kullervo Goes to War’ by A. Gallen-Kallela, 1935. 49
Figure 4.1  Cover of the English translation of Aho’s The Railroad (Rautatie, 1884), featuring Matti and Liisa waiting for the train at Lapinlahti station, one of Eero Järnefelt’s (1863–1937) original illustrations. © Norvik Press Ltd.

Figure 4.2  The river Akerselva seen from Hausmann bridge (Hausmannsbro) looking towards Christian Krohgs gate. Photograph taken by the Norwegian photographer Martinius Skøien (1849–1916) between 1880 and 1910. Source: National Library of Norway.

Figure 4.3  The painting ‘Struggle for Survival’ (‘Kampen for tilværelsen’, 1889) by the Norwegian naturalist painter and author Christian Krogh (1852–1925). Source: National Gallery of Norway.

Figure 7.1  The painting ‘The Nathanson Family’ (‘Familien Nathanson’, 1818) by the Danish painter C.W. Eckersberg (1783–1853), today considered a representation of a typical middle-class family in the Nordic countries in the nineteenth century. Source: Statens Museum for Kunst.

Figure 7.2  Adeleide Johannesen performing Nora’s tarantella scene in the first staging of the play at Den Nationale Scene (The National Stage) in Bergen in 1880. Source: National Library of Norway.

Figure 7.3  Photograph of Helmer and Svetlana, the Helmers’ au pair, in Helmer Hardcore − A Doll’s House 2 by Jakob Weis (1970–). The play, which appeared in Danish in 2007, was translated into English by Paul Russell Garrett and produced by [Foreign Affairs] theatre company in 2015, featuring Krzysia Balińska and Will Timbers. © Camila França Photography.

Figure 9.1  Cover for the Danish edition of Niviaq Korneliussen’s novel Homo Sapienne. Published by Greenlandic publishing house Milik in Nuuk 2014. Cover photo featuring the actor Maria Mathiassen is by Jørgen Chemnitz in collaboration with Korneliussen. Cover design by Ivalu Risager. © Milik Publishing.
Figure 11.1  The Danish painter Johan Thomas Lundbye’s (1818–48) ‘En Dansk Kyst. Motiv fra Kitnæs ved Roskilde Fjord’ (A Danish Coast. View from Kitnæs on Roskilde Fjord. Zealand, 1843). Oil on canvas. 188.5 × 255.5 cm. Source: Statens Museum for Kunst.

Figure 11.2  Johan Christian Dahl’s (1788–1857) painting ‘Fra Stalheim’ (View from Stalheim, 1842). Oil on canvas. 190 × 246 cm. Source: National Gallery of Norway.

Figure 12.1  Res icke till Amerika (Do not travel to America). Poster from Nationalföreningen mot Emigrationen (the National Union Against Emigration). Source: Riksan-tikvarieämbetet. CC BY.