From Conflict to Inclusion in Housing

Cairns, Graham, Artopoulos, Georgios, Day, Kirsten

Published by University College London

Cairns, Graham, et al.
From Conflict to Inclusion in Housing: The Interaction of Communities, Residents and Activists.
University College London, 2017.
Project MUSE. muse.jhu.edu/book/81939.

For additional information about this book
https://muse.jhu.edu/book/81939
Figures

Figure 0.1  Green corridor at Crescent House residential block, Golden Lane Estate, Barbican, London, UK. Author’s image  12
Figure 0.2  Staircase landing and transitional spaces at Crescent House residential block, Golden Lane Estate, Barbican, London, UK. Author’s image  13
Figure 0.3  The open-air, multi-storey, atria of the Crescent House residential block, Golden Lane Estate, Barbican, London, UK. Author’s image  14
Figure 1.1  Hotel Cambridge, facing Avenida Nove de Julho. Author’s image  24
Figure 1.2  Central São Paulo’s hodgepodge of morphologies, typologies and infrastructures. Author’s image  28
Figure 1.3  ‘Hotel Cambridge threatened, a landmark of the city’. O Estado de S. Paulo  30
Figure 1.4  Hotel Cambridge, after its occupation by MSTC-FLM. November 2012, archives MSTC-FLM  34
Figure 1.5  Mutirão, and the piecemeal architectural reclaim of the derelict hotel. November 2012, Archives MSTC-FLM  35
Figure 1.6  Weekly occupation ‘assembleia’, meeting of inhabitants and co-ordination. Author’s image  37
Figure 3.1  Historical transformation of housing typology.  63
Figure 4.1  Toronto residential tower redevelopment proposal. Image: Graeme Stewart, ERA Architects, courtesy of Cityscope. (Cityscope is a nonprofit news outlet that covers innovations in cities around the world. Read more at Cityscope.org)  82
Figure 5.1  Ghost towns holding the tension between preserving the past and planning the future. Author’s image  89
Figure 5.2  Built in local stone and lime over 700 years, Torri Superiore presents a unique urban layout with several five-storey buildings. Author’s image

Figure 5.3  Architectural interventions and their effects on the character of the historic fabric. Author’s image

Figure 6.1  Operation of Vinh’s community development fund (CDF). Author’s image

Figure 7.1  Barangaroo and the adjacent suburbs of Millers Point and The Rocks holding significant stock of affordable housing in the Sydney CBD. Author’s image adapted from Google Maps and atlas.id data

Figure 7.2  Age comparisons: age groups as a percentage of total. Cred Community Planning, Social Impact Assessment of the Potential Social Impacts on the Existing Millers Point Community, and the Broader Social Housing System (2013)

Figure 8.1  Untitled Collective, 2014, Open for Inspection, West Space Gallery, Melbourne, mixed-media installation. Photo: Christo Crocker

Figure 9.1  The Mobile Homestead looking east from Woodward Avenue. MOCAD at left. Author’s image

Figure 9.2  The Mobile Homestead looking north-east from Canfield Street. Author’s image

Figure 9.3  Cape Cod Revival style illustration in Principles of Planning Small Houses, 1940 edition, page 2. Federal Housing Administration (Washington, DC)

Figure 9.4  ‘Basic Plan, One-Story, Two-Bedrooms’, from Principles of Planning Small Houses, 1940 edition, page 16. Federal Housing Administration (Washington, DC)

Figure 9.5  The Kelley Family House (left), Northlawn Subdivision, Westland, Michigan. Author’s image

Figure 11.1  Building OPERA 1 partitions using plywood reclaimed from CNC manufacturing process. Photo: Studio Polpo

Figure 11.2  A private bed-space in OPERA 1. Photo: Studio Polpo
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Figure</th>
<th>Description</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Figure 11.3</td>
<td>Screen printing evening event during OPERA 1. Photo: Studio Polpo</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Figure 11.4</td>
<td>One of many shared meals during OPERA 1. Photo: Studio Polpo</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Figure 11.5</td>
<td>Doing the washing up at OPERA 1, with a view to the street. Photo: Elizabeth Jordan</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Figure 11.6</td>
<td>Mapping showing how writing and documentation have become an integral part of the OPERA prototyping practice. Photo: Studio Polpo</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Figure 12.1</td>
<td>A familiar image of dilapidated dwelling in Liverpool’s inner-city neighbourhoods. Author’s images</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Figure 12.2</td>
<td>Weller Street Co-op resident-led design, well managed and in better condition today compared with surrounding housing built afterwards. Author’s images</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Figure 12.3</td>
<td>Hatton houses in Liverpool’s urban core, overshadowed by Radio City tower and the Anglican Cathedral. Author’s images</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Figure 12.4</td>
<td>Granby Street in the late 1960s, a once-bustling shopping street before decline and demolition, compared to the replacement housing built by HMR. Ronnie Hughes’ blog (www.asenseofplace.com) and author’s image</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Figure 12.5</td>
<td>Homebaked bakery emblazoned with its slogan and the terraced row the CLT is hoping to acquire from the council for affordable housing. Author’s images</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>