Research Universities in Africa

Bunting, Ian, Cloete, Nico

Published by African Minds

Bunting, Ian and Nico Cloete.
Research Universities in Africa.
Project MUSE. muse.jhu.edu/book/63497.

For additional information about this book
https://muse.jhu.edu/book/63497

For content related to this chapter
https://muse.jhu.edu/related_content?type=book&id=2257522
Table of contents

Acronyms and abbreviations vii
About the authors vi
Contributors viii
Preface xi

PART 1 TOWARDS RESEARCH UNIVERSITIES IN AFRICA

Chapter 1 From flagships to research universities 3
Discourses on the role of higher education in development in Africa 3
- The post-independence ‘development university’ discourse 4
- ‘Revitalisation’ of the university for development and the knowledge economy 6
International funding for higher education in Africa 8
Empirical evidence on universities in Africa 10
The Higher Education Research and Advocacy Network in Africa (Herana) 12
Researching the link between higher education and development 15
- The analytical framework 15
- National development models and a pact about the role of higher education 18
- The strength of the academic core 20
From flagship to research universities 21
The importance of research universities for global science 24
- Research universities are important for Africa 26
- Can we talk of research universities in Africa? 29
- Herana universities are the most research-productive in their countries 33
Conclusion 35

Chapter 2 The research performance of eight universities in Africa 37
Measuring institutional performance: Herana principles 37
Collecting academic core data 38
Trends in academic core data 40
- Student enrolments 40
- Graduates 43
- Academic staff 44
Introduction to discussion of academic core indicators 4 and 5 47
| Permanent academic staff as high-level inputs | 48 |
| Doctoral enrolments as high-level inputs | 51 |
| Doctoral graduates as high-level knowledge outputs | 53 |
| Research publications as high-level knowledge outputs | 55 |

Determining cross-national performance goals and targets | 56 |

Setting cross-national quantitative targets | 61 |

Assessing the research performance of eight African universities | 62 |

National and institutional policy and planning contexts | 64 |

Empirical evidence of research performance | 67 |

Empirical evidence of changes in research performance over time | 70 |

Placing the Herana universities in research-activity categories | 73 |

Conclusion | 76 |

PART 2 UNDERSTANDING THE RESEARCH UNIVERSITY IN AFRICA

Chapter 3 The role of the research university | 81 |

Four university models | 81 |

Inconsistency in international development cooperation | 83 |

Inconsistency in expectations among national and institutional stakeholders | 84 |

Research aspirations and their take-up | 85 |

Research aspirations | 85 |

National realities | 87 |

Inconsistency between national and institutional policy goals | 88 |

Conclusion | 90 |

Chapter 4 Tensions between functions in the research university | 92 |

Historically-determined functions of universities | 92 |

Contemporary tensions between functions in universities | 93 |

How universities are managing the tensions between functions | 96 |

The University of Mauritius | 97 |

Makerere University | 101 |

The University of Ghana | 103 |

Conclusion | 105 |

Chapter 5 Incentivising research performance at African universities | 107 |

University incentives for research | 107 |

Funding and development aid for research | 110 |

Government incentives for research | 111 |

Research incentives and a differentiated higher education system | 114 |

Conclusion | 117 |
Table of Contents

Chapter 6  Evidence-based planning and governance 119
Planning, the importance of evidence and the role of Herana 120
Government capacity, systems and data quality 125
Data for planning and governance 127
Conclusion 129

Chapter 7  Knowledge and networks 130
Why networks matter 130
Herana as a network 133
Global research networks 139
Possible implications of network thinking 144

PART 3 Academic Core Profiles of Eight African Universities

Chapter 8  Introduction to institutional profiles 149
Chapter 9  University of Botswana 157
Chapter 10  University of Cape Town 171
Chapter 11  University of Dar es Salaam 190
Chapter 12  Eduardo Mondlane University 207
Chapter 13  University of Ghana 220
Chapter 14  Makerere University 235
Chapter 15  University of Mauritius 251
Chapter 16  University of Nairobi 266

PART 4 Conclusion 283

References 288
Appendix: Herana publications 293