Acknowledgements

During the post-independence period, every African country has struggled with the vexing issue of the role of higher education in development. While many studies on higher education in Africa deal with this problematic indirectly, very few have actually taken it on directly. It took a consultation and discussion period of almost three years between the Centre for Higher Education Transformation (CHET), senior researchers and the US Partnership for Higher Education in Africa to establish the Higher Education Research and Advocacy Network in Africa (HERANA).¹

Credit must be given to the US Partnership for supporting such a complex and potentially controversial project – and one which would not easily have been funded by a single foundation. Having on board the Ford Foundation, the Carnegie Corporation of New York, the Rockefeller Foundation and the Kresge Foundation contributed to the credibility of the project amongst higher education leaders and academics. A special word of thanks must go to Dr John Butler-Adam (Ford), who ‘steered’ the Partnership in this project, and to Dr Claudia Frittelli (Carnegie), who participated actively throughout.

The capacity-building component of HERANA is the Higher Education Masters in Africa, run jointly between the universities of the Western Cape, Makerere and Oslo, with students from eight African countries. The Masters programme is funded by the NOMA programme of the Norwegian Agency for Development Cooperation (NORAD) with Ms Tove Kivil a constant source of support.

We must also acknowledge the vice-chancellors of the eight participating universities who expressed their confidence in the project and identified relevant staff (see Project Group below) to provide institutional data and participate in the network. The full list of project participants is included in Appendix B.

A special word of thanks must also go to Professor Manuel Castells, whose seminal 1991 paper, The University System: Engine of development in the new world economy, not only shifted the thinking of agencies such as the World Bank, but was an inspiration to the project group. Prof. Castells’ continued participation and support is both a motivation and a challenge.

We must acknowledge the fortuitous coincidence of HERANA and University World News starting at almost the same time. University World News, with its 30 000 readers, around 14 000 of whom subscribe to the Africa edition, has been a source of information for our project and a distribution resource. It has been a pleasure being in partnership with the editor, Karen MacGregor, who also edited the report and wrote the Executive Summary.

¹ For a description of the various HERANA project components, participants and publications, visit the website at http://www.chet.org.za/programmes/herana/.

Finally, our thanks go to the Board of CHET, which not only expressed confidence in the CHET leadership, but participated in consultations to establish HERANA. Four members who participated actively in the project are Prof. Teboho Moja (Chair of the Board, New York University), Dr Lidia Brito (UNESCO), Dr Goolam Mohamedbhai (former Secretary-General, Association of African Universities), and Dr Esi Sutherland-Addy (University of Ghana).