ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

This book is the result of over ten years of research, writing, and discussion. Many people and institutions provided support along the way to the book’s final publication. I want to thank the UCLA International Institute and Getty Museum for their wonderful summer institute, “Constructing the Past in the Middle East,” in Istanbul, Turkey in 2004; the Getty Foundation for a postdoctoral fellowship during 2005–2006; and the Graham Foundation for Advanced Studies in the Fine Arts Grant Award for a subvention grant toward the costs of publishing this book. I would also like to thank my home institution, San Francisco State University (SFSU), for providing me with a Presidential Award for Professional Development in 2007, and SFSU deans Keith Morrison and Ron Compesi for making my professional leaves possible and for their encouragement.

My mentors at UCLA were a constant source of support for my research. Robert L. Brown, my dissertation advisor, offered me his enthusiasm, trust, and unwavering encouragement. Irene Bierman-McKinney’s passion for Islamic architecture and her innovative approaches to its study helped me discover my love for Mughal architecture and shaped this project. I also thank Donald Preziosi, Swati Chattopadhyay, Robert Nelson, and Tapati Guha-Thakurta for their guidance at different stages of my research and writing.

In India the American Institute of Indian Studies (AIIS) facilitated my travel and provided me with a place to stay and exchange ideas with fellow researchers while in New Delhi. At the Indian National Trust for Art and Cultural Heritage (INTACH) I wish to thank Jahnwij Sharma and Ashis Banerjee. Dr. R.C. Agrawal at the Archaeological Survey of India (ASI), and the staff at AIIS helped open both front and back doors at the Mughal monuments. Mr. R.K. Dhiksit and Mr. R.L. Kohli in the Agra Office of the ASI afforded me the rare opportunity to observe the behind the scenes activities at the Taj Mahal and the Agra Fort. The staff at the National Archive, the Nehru Memorial Library, and the Delhi State Archives extended their help and guidance in accessing collections. I also thank Purnima Mehta, Amita Baig, Adnan Khan, O.P. Mahour, and Radheshyam Gola.
Thanks go to the staff of Unesco’s World Heritage Center in Paris, especially Jukka Jokilehto, Minja Yang, Peter Stott, and Sarah Titchen; the staff of the Oriental and India Office Collection at the British Library; the staff of the Huntington Library in Pasadena; and in New Haven, the staff of the Yale Center for British Art.

At SFSU I thank the members of my department, especially Richard Mann, Gwen Allen, Candace Crockett, and Barbara Foster. Thanks go to others at SFSU, including Chris Chekuri, Prithvi Datta, Falu Bakrania, Kasturi Ray, Sanjoy Banerjee, Anoshua Chaudhuri, and Lucia Volk, for reading parts of my manuscript and offering thoughtful feedback. I am grateful to Carrie Thaler of the Lacanian School of Psychoanalysis in San Francisco for taking time out of her busy schedule to thoughtfully read my introduction. I thank Nancy Um for her friendship, encouragement, and advice, and for the invitation to the Harpur College Dean’s Workshop in Visual Culture at Binghamton, where I received valuable feedback from graduate students and faculty. Other scholars and friends that offered their support, commentary, and kind advice are: Michael Hatt, Tim Barringer, Fred Bohrer, Bruce Grant, Saleema Waraich, Nicole Watts, Carel Betram, Aftab Ahmad, and Taymiya R. Zaman. In India, Malik Faisal provided excellent help with the translation of Urdu newspaper articles when I was seriously pressed for time and offered his interviewing skills in Delhi and Lucknow. Max Bruce and Christine Boucher lent me their language skills and knowledge of poetry. I thank my graduate students, Krystal Hauseur, Eun June Park, Natalie Rico Patton, and Bradley Hyppa, and my undergraduate students, Joy Iris-Willbanks, Leah McNamee, Shelly Fuller, and Matthew Bowen for all their encouragement and help.

At Duke University Press I wish to thank Anitra Grisales, Mandy Earley, and Jade Brooks, the editing team, the anonymous readers, and especially Ken Wissoker for his help and patience in ushering me through the overwhelming process of turning a dissertation into a book.

Finally, I thank my family for their love, patience, and support. Henning, I thank you for not only listening to me bat around ideas about monuments for over ten years and editing my chapters and Persian translations, but especially for your love and humor. I could not have completed this book without you.
