The concept for this book came from Dr. Francis X. Reidy of the Joint Special Operations University (JSOU) in Tampa, Florida. The author thanks him for suggesting it and hopes that operators, planners, and commanders find the book useful.

William Knarr, Robert Nalepa, and others currently or formerly associated with JSOU provided gracious assistance and encouragement.

Jack C. Guy spent a great deal of time going through the manuscript line by line. I appreciated his invaluable input. My thanks also are owed to Randy Hagan, Paul Huxhold, Tim Nye, Tony Gendra, and Robert L. Gibson for reading the manuscript and making comments.

Dr. Ronald A. Faucheux and Celinda Lake, two of America’s top pollsters and strategists, offered important comments and additions that were especially helpful. The author has worked closely with them both and with Joe Gaylord for many years. Conversations and thinking over a long period of time with those three individuals added enormously to the manuscript. Wally Clinton was very helpful in illuminating social media analytics. Dr. Michael Krause, who wrote the preface, was especially helpful and supportive. Thanks also are due to Frank Hoffman, King Mallory, Neville Bolt, Greg Hicks, George Beebe, Ofer Fridman, David Betz, Al Bynum, Bill Parker, Chris Stewart, Ed Goeas, Scott McDonald, Bob Giesler, Mike Dabadie, Vaughn Fitzpatrick, Darby Arakelian, Stephen Padgett, Marvin Weinbaum, John Matheny, Stephen Nitzschke, Sandy Wade, Ambassador Brian Carlson, and Andy Welsh. These individuals all shared their experience and expertise in conversations over a long period. They informed and illuminated my thinking. There are many others whom I cannot name who also provided outstanding input or inspiration that made this work possible.
