Acknowledgements

In large part, this economic history represents a compilation and distillation of the work of those who have been observing Cambodia’s political and economic progress for the past 150 years. My thanks, therefore, are due to them and their academic efforts and also to the current scholarship, especially that of the new generation of Cambodian economic researchers, that is contributing significantly to our general understanding of the major changes taking place in their country’s economy at the turn of the twenty-first century. As always, I owe particular gratitude to the director and her staff at the State Archives in Phnom Penh for their professional assistance that is so graciously given to foreign researchers.
