Writing in Time
Werner, Marta L.

Published by Amherst College Press

Werner, Marta L.
Writing in Time: Emily Dickinson's Master Hours.

For additional information about this book
https://muse.jhu.edu/book/99350

For content related to this chapter
https://muse.jhu.edu/related_content?type=book&id=3118257
Contents

6 Acknowledgments
8 Archives & Scholarly Editions
10 Prologue
To the Reader
12 Historical Introduction
The Discovery, Transmission, and Printing Histories of the “Master Letters”
14 Early Printings
19 In the Hour of the New Bibliography
24 Homage to Ralph W. Franklin
26 Textual Introduction
From Letters to Documents: Imagining a New Edition of the “Master” Documents
27 Re-drawing the Boundaries
31 Dating the “Master” Documents
38 Editing in Space and Time
42 Principles of Transcription
Manuscript Witnesses & Transcriptions in Time

48 Dear Master / I am ill – (A 827)
53 The writing line, ca. spring 1858–ca. summer 1860
58 Mute – thy Coronation – (A 825)
60 The writing line, ca. autumn 1860–ca. winter 1861
61 Oh ’ did I offend it – (A 829)
67 The writing line, ca. spring 1861
69 A wife – at Daybreak / I shall be – (A 826)
72 The writing line, ca. late spring–ca. summer 1861
73 Master . / If you saw a bullet (A 828)

Reading Hours

Commentaries on the “Master” Documents

84 The Hour of Flowers: A 827
87 The Hour of Ermine: A 825
89 The Hour of Lead: A 829
93 The Midnight Hour: A 826
95 The Queen’s Hour: A 828

Appendices

102 Appendix 1: Fascicled “Master” Poems
108 Appendix 2: A 826, Second Variant Version
110 Appendix 3: Additional Candidates for the “Master” Constellation, 1858–1861

Afterword

Interpretation in a New Key by Jerome McGann

Works Cited & Further Reading