Writing in Time
Dear Master,

I am so thrilled hearing from you once more. I will not speak of it again. I write with my strongest hand, longing to tell you my thoughts. Perhaps you will use this paper and write for space again. I cannot write longer.

And wonder! And surprised me so. I wish that for you well.
WRITING IN TIME
EMILY DICKINSON’S MASTER HOURS

MARTA WERNER
AMHERST COLLEGE PRESS
Contents

6 Acknowledgments
8 Archives & Scholarly Editions
10 Prologue
   To the Reader
12 Historical Introduction
   The Discovery, Transmission, and Printing Histories of the “Master Letters”
14 Early Printings
19 In the Hour of the New Bibliography
24 Homage to Ralph W. Franklin
26 Textual Introduction
   From Letters to Documents: Imagining a New Edition of the “Master” Documents
27 Re-drawing the Boundaries
31 Dating the “Master” Documents
38 Editing in Space and Time
42 Principles of Transcription