Acknowledgments

This book would have been impossible without the assistance of many people. I would like to take this time to thank them for their contributions to this work. While each of these individuals helped me to complete this study, any errors or mistakes are mine alone.

I would like to begin by thanking Marsha Rozenblit for her years of guidance and mentorship, and Howard Louthan for his advice and support. This project was made stronger by the constructive suggestions of Gary Cohen, Margarete Grandner, Gay Gullickson, John Lampe, Judith Torney-Purta, and the assistance and encouragement of Courtney Broscious, Jason Ciejka, Peter Höyng, Kate Keane, Thomas Moore, and Frederic Tate. I also am grateful to Thomas Balcerski, Caitlin Carenen, Bradley Davis, David Frye, Stefan Kamola, Anna Jaroszyńska-Kirchmann, Joan Meznar, Jamel Ostwald, and Barbara Tucker, my amazing colleagues in Eastern Connecticut State University’s history department.

I am equally indebted to the staff of all of the archives and libraries I used and am grateful for their assistance. In particular, I would like to thank the staff of the Österreichischen Nationalbibliothek, Lorenz Mikoletzky of the Österreichisches Staatsarchiv, Stefan Spevak and Jakob Wührer of the Wiener Stadt- und Landesarchiv, Clemens Steinhuber of the library of the MAK, Vienna, Viktoria Etzlstorfer of the Oberösterreichisches Landesarchiv, Markus Altrichter of the Archiv der Stadt Linz, Pavel Koblasa of the Národní archiv in the Czech Republic, and Veronika Knotková of the Archiv hlavního města Prahy. I am similarly grateful to Justin Race, Katherine Purple, Christopher Brannan, and the rest of the amazing team at Purdue University Press. They have made the editorial process a pleasure.

This project would have been impossible without the generous Fulbright-Mach research fellowship provided by Fulbright Austria and the Österreichisches Austauschdienst (OeAD). Beyond financial assistance, Lonnie Johnson of Fulbright Austria, Lydia Skarits of the OeAD, and their respective staffs ensured that my research proceeded smoothly and successfully. I am also grateful to the history department of the University of Maryland and the donors who provided funding in the form of the Gordon Prange History
Department Dissertation Writing Fellowship, the Samuel Merrill Graduate Student Research Award, and the Arts and Humanities Travel Awards. A faculty development grant and the John Fox Slater Fund for Historical Research from Eastern Connecticut State University allowed me to finish the research for this book, and I am thankful for their continued support.

There are no words that can express my gratitude to the amazing staff members who have helped me along the way. I would especially like to thank Jodi Hall, Catherine Pickles, Paula Barriga Sanchez, and Catalina Toala at the University of Maryland and Brenda Schiavetti at Eastern Connecticut State University for their assistance and friendship. Finally, I would like to thank my partner, Michael, my father, Victor, my sister, Mandie, and all of my friends for their encouragement during this entire process.
