AUTHOR’S NOTE

FOR THE SAKE OF CONSISTENCY AND HISTORICAL ACCURACY, THE TEXT uses original Polish and Hungarian place names for cities and towns that were common prior to the war. It also helps to recreate a flavor of a lost era and world. As borderlands, Carpathian Ruthenia and Galicia’s locations meant the constant shifting of national boundaries also forced rapid transition from language to language. There are several instances that various towns in the Soviet Union were renamed after historical personalities or Soviet leaders. The reader can find the multiple usage of names of cities and locations in the index.
