Acknowledgments

Publication of this book would not have been possible without the support and expertise of Robert Langenfeld, whose enthusiasm for the project has been matched only by his devotion to detail. Carolyn Williams would like to thank the staff at the Center for the Critical Analysis of Contemporary Culture at Rutgers University, especially Link Landvik-Larsen. Lesley Higgins is grateful to her research assistant, Elicia Clements.

Individual work on Pater always depends on collective critical exchange. We would like to thank those who have helped to ensure the continuity of this dialogue. The Pater Newsletter, edited by Jay Losey, and recent conferences organized by Stephen Bann (University of Kent, 1994), Hayden Ward (University of West Virginia, 1996), Laurel Brake (University of Oxford, 2000), and the International Walter Pater Society have become essential. During the Oxford conference, a reading of Tom Stoppard’s The Invention of Love directed by John Conlon reaffirmed the intellectual and cultural pertinence of Pater studies. During an exchange with Benjamin Jowett, Stoppard’s Pater reminds us that the investigation of “human culture,” with all its complications, was and is an enduringly provocative enterprise. This collection of essays represents both enduring topics and recent provocations within the current field of Pater studies.
