1990
Herbert Horne was poet, architect, editor, essayist, typographer, designer of books, and the first scientific historian from the British Isles. In a period known for the brevity of its lives, the narrowness of its range, its perpetual flight to the peripheral, Horne’s sanity, sobriety and variousness are remarkable.

'Judgment consists in the knowledge of how to relate parts to the whole, so ensuring fitness, harmony, proportion and symmetry.'

'Architecture is queen of the arts, indeed the total art and by analogy the architect is the total artist.'
