J. M. Barrie

Markgraf, Carl

Published by ELT Press

Markgraf, Carl.
Project MUSE. muse.jhu.edu/book/25281.

For additional information about this book
https://muse.jhu.edu/book/25281

For content related to this chapter
https://muse.jhu.edu/related_content?type=book&id=965177
ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

FOR THEIR HELP in gathering the materials for this bibliography, I thankfully acknowledge the research assistance of the following in the order of their contributions: Russel Wiebe of Lehigh State University, Pamela Lieske of the University of Massachusetts, William Chamberlain of Portland State University, and Lise Markgraf of Indiana University. Without their aid, this seven year dig would likely have been years longer. Similarly, the final stages of preparing these thousands of items for print might have stretched into infinity without the able editorial assistance of Sheila P. Donohue of ELT Press.

I wish also to express my gratitude to Portland State University for support of this project through a Faculty Development Grant and a Peer Review Award, both of which supported travel to the British Library for materials not easily accessible in the United States. To the British Library (British Museum) and its Periodicals Division, Colindale, and to its staff, I am indebted for their many services, as I am to the PSU Library for providing mounds of Interlibrary Loan items. For funding of research assistance, I owe thanks to my colleagues in the PSU English Department Graduate Committee who voted that aid, and in particular to Dean William Paudler, College of Liberal Arts and Sciences, who found the funds to carry it out.

For initiating and encouraging this effort, I have to thank Professor Robert Langenfeld, Editor of English Literature in Transition, 1880-1920. This endeavor grew out of his initial assignment of the Barrie bibliography for ELT publication. Neither of us, I am sure, suspected the length to which it would grow, nor the lengths—both in time and space—to which we would go in carrying out our mutual commitment.

Finally, but most importantly, gratitude and apologies are due my wife, Mary Barbara. Gratitude for her monumental patience as this project ground slowly through its years to completion. Apologies for how much of our time together was lost by it.