I would like to thank the following journals for permission to reprint here, in whole or in part, articles that were previously published. “Philosophy as Teaching: James’s ‘Knight Errant’” appeared in The Journal of Speculative Philosophy in fall 2004. “Unrespectability and the Wild Beasts of the Philosophical Desert” appeared in the same journal in winter 2003. “Creative Teachers: Risk, Responsibility, and Love” was published in Journal of Education in 2002. An essay on Thoreau, entitled “Wildness as Political Act,” appeared in Personalist Forum in spring 2000. Finally, “American Loss in Cavell’s Emerson” was published by the Transactions of the Charles S. Peirce Society in winter 1993. I would like also to thank David O’Hara for the cover photography and Gary Green for the generous use of his College Heights Exxon station.